ASWU News: Did you know?

Two speakers came to the ASWU meeting this week.

Doug Sugano – Honors Program

At this point there are four honors classes for the freshmen class. Several of the honors courses offered are honors crusades, honors D-Group for 150, honors GE-125 for engineering students.

The plan is to continue to add honors courses throughout the year. There will be two honors courses in Jan Term one being held at the Costa Rica campus. There will also be two honors courses added in the spring. For a total of eight honors courses this year.

At this point there are about 180 honors students in the freshmen class.

Keith Kelley – Service Learning and Community Engagement Director

Keith updated ASWU on what the service learning and community engagement team are up to.

Keep your eye out for the RISE program. The program focuses on both tutoring and mentoring students in the West Central District of Spokane.

The service learning and community engagement team also works on spring break service trips.

At this point there are going to be a dozen spring break service trips. The trips will range from staying local in Spokane to far away lands such as Jamaica.

Jamaica Service Spring Break Trip

The trip will be taking 13 students. They are working with Mission Discovery for the fifth year in a row. The cost of the trip before fundraising is $1,725 per student.

Applications can be found at the Info Desk.

Whitworth and Fair Trade

Whitworth is working on becoming the first fair trade university in Washington and the second in the Pacific Northwest. The steps that need to be taken in order to become a fair trade university are; all food needs to be fair trade, which Sodexo has already made happen. Items sold in the bookstore would need to be fair trade. Finally educational events about fair trade would be held on campus.
